For our current clients at East Springfield Veterinary Hospital:

If your pet becomes ill or if you have any concerns/questions - please call as soon as possible so we can best assist you in finding a solution. We may be able to help you over the phone or we may recommend an appointment depending on the recommendation of our doctors. We save a few appointments daily for sick visits so calling as soon as possible in the day can help us help you better. In the event that we are not open, if we do not have any additional availability that day OR if your pet is severely ill and requires more immediate, intensive care emergency hospitals are your option for seeking care for your pet. We have attached to this note the list of hospitals with emergency availability, usually 24/7.

Other Resources

If your pet is referred to an emergency facility for any reason, here are some things that can help you:

- 1. Develop a financial plan. Carecredit.com can help cover unexpected expenses.
- Call ahead to the emergency room to describe the concern you have with your pet. The ER receptionist can inform you of the wait time, check in protocol, and availability of certain doctors (ie - if there is a surgeon available for emergency surgery if you are worried your pet ate a foreign body). This may help you decide which ER you should be going to.
- 3. Call your regular veterinarian to email any pertinent medical records to you or the emergency room. In the event your regular veterinarian is closed, leave a message and bring what you have.
- 4. Understand that the wait times in the emergency room may vary as they would in a human emergency room due to a variety of factors.
- 5. If the ER recommends any follow up, such as suture removals, recheck appointments, or follow up diagnostics contact your regular vet as soon as you find out in order to make arrangements to have these services done.
